I can hardly believe it, but December 1 marks the 25th anniversary of the Ron Brown Scholar Program. We’ll be celebrating our silver anniversary all year long, but I wanted to take a moment here to reflect on how far we have come and thank all of you for being a part of this journey.

In a very real way, the Scholars and I have come of age with the Program. When Anthony Pilaro approached me with the idea to establish a scholarship to honor late Secretary of Commerce Ron Brown, I was younger than many of our Scholars today. It has been a quarter of a century since that fateful day, but Tony’s vision—and his boundless generosity—guided us in those early days and continues to inspire me.

All of you who know me know that I’m big on asking for help. From day one, I reached out to my friends, advisors and every expert who’d talk to me looking for advice and insight on how to realize Tony’s audacious goal of creating from scratch a network of talented young people committed to doing well and doing good. That group now numbers 534 Scholars. In the beginning we thought it would be all about the extraordinarily talented young Scholars, but over the years I’ve come to see that it’s all of us—the Board members, Scholars, donors and Program staff—that make this Program what it is. You all are our ambassadors and supporters; as you champion what we’re doing and join us in the critical work of helping extend the Program’s reach, as we all work together to serve the common good.

So far, the Ron Brown Scholar Program has granted over $21 million in scholarships, and we’re nowhere near done. In fact, thanks to the generosity of the Norman and Ruth Rales Foundation, we’ve been able to double the number of awards we’ll give from 2020-2024—that’s an extra one hundred Scholars! But from the beginning Tony insisted that we do something special, something more than just giving away money. He knew then, and each day has borne him out, that a collective is stronger than a bunch of individuals, but that to harness that power we’d have to “keep them together.” And so we have, working intentionally to realize “The Value of One, the Power of All.”

That’s the main reason that the Ron Brown Scholar Program has grown to encompass three separate initiatives: the Scholarship itself, the Ron Brown - Ruth and Norman Rales Leaders Network and our Guided Pathway Support Program (GPS). Through the Leaders Network we have been able to multiply our reach many times over. Our Captains, as they are known, are the scholarship applicants we’d happily give money to if we had infinite dollars to give. Captains are students who, for one reason or another, didn’t win, but whom we’re proud to call part of the family. Thanks to the hard work of Holly Duke, Director of Leadership (continued on page 2)
About Our Founder: Anthony M. Pilaro

In 1996, Anthony (Tony) Pilaro founded the Ron Brown Scholar Program to honor the late Secretary of Commerce Ronald H. Brown and his legacy of achievement and global leadership. From its very inception, Tony Pilaro wanted this to be no ordinary scholarship program. He was determined to increase the number of African American leaders in his endeavor to create a new kind of “old boys network”, that is more inclusive and reflective of today’s world. Each generation of these Ron Brown Scholar leaders, after years of community building during their college and postgraduate pursuits, through formative influences such as mentoring and conference experiences, consult and work with one another, ensuring continuity. The goal is to keep Ron Brown’s ethic of “doing well by doing good.”

For 25 years, Tony Pilaro’s philanthropy and vision have created a highly successful network concept for emerging young leaders. Tony’s engagement and support in creating a viable model for young people to succeed, and remain committed to giving back, is what makes his vision extraordinary.

RBSP Welcomes Timothy Kimble

The Program welcomed Timothy Kimble to the team as a College Access Advisor for the Guided Pathway Support (GPS) Program and he also serves as a member of the Ron Brown Scholar support team. He joins the Program after serving as an admission counselor at the University of Virginia’s Office of Undergraduate Admission. While at UVA, Tim was part of the Outreach Team, working to recruit and support underrepresented students, first-generation students, and students from low-income backgrounds. Tim believes that the college advising process should empower each student, through information, to make decisions that are right for them. He is looking forward to using his experience to help GPS Navigators through what can be an overwhelming process and hopes to serve as a resource to alleviate some of the stress that students may feel.

Tim is a graduate of the University of Virginia where he was an Echols Scholar, Ridley Scholar, and University Achievement Award recipient. He earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in Biology and a Bachelor of Arts degree as a distinguished major in Political Philosophy, Policy and Law (PPL).

Message from the President

& Engagement, hundreds of students each year receive the same support, the same networking opportunities, personal coaching and job services as the Ron Brown Scholars. That’s over 1,200 brilliant young people right now getting the full Ron Brown experience—well, everything but the money! But who knows—maybe one day we will be able to fund them all.

I think there’s no better example of this Program’s dedication to service than the GPS Program. This hi-tech, hi-touch college access program helps African American high school students from all over the country select, apply to and pay for college. Here’s the best part: it was our Scholars’ idea! Kiya Jones (RBS 1999) runs the program, and it is staffed almost entirely by Ron Brown Scholars and Captains. They’re “leaving the ladder down” every day, using the expertise they gained as part of the Ron Brown family to improve the prospects not just of the young GPS Navigators themselves, but also their families and communities. Talk about “the power of all”: well over 90% of the 4,000+ students they’ve served have gone on to college! I never dreamed 25 years ago that RBSP would grow to touch so many lives. But that’s the thing about making a difference: once you start, you never know where your influence will end.

This incredible network that you’ve helped us build, this web of care and affinity that binds us together—it will, in time, outlive us all. I take great comfort in that, in knowing that the good we do will continue to make the world a better place long after I’m gone. So thank you—thank you for the passion that sustains us, for the care that carried us through a difficult year and above all for your service. We couldn’t do this important work without you.

With heartfelt thanks,

Michael A. Mallory
President and CEO

CELEBRATING
OF RON BROWN SCHOLAR IMPACT

Among the first legislative acts of the 1st United States Congress was the Judiciary Act of 1789, which laid out the initial structure of the entire US federal court system. Along with setting the number of justices of the Supreme Court (six) and laying its procedures, the Act divided the new country into 13 judicial districts, created the district and circuit courts, and established the position of US Attorney, whose duty it was (and remains) to represent the federal government in the inferior courts. George Washington appointed Richard Harrison—Alexander Hamilton’s former law partner—the first US Attorney for the district of New York. As a growing population increased the pressure on the courts system, that original district was divided and subdivided; today the Southern District of New York, headquartered in Manhattan, is broadly recognized as one of the most prestigious and powerful offices in the country. Following his nomination by President Joe Biden, Damian Williams (RBS 1998) has just been confirmed by the Senate as the new US Attorney for the Southern District of New York. He is the first African American (and first Ron Brown Scholar) to hold the office in its 232-year history.

Damian’s historic appointment puts him squarely in the pathbreaking tradition of Ronald H. Brown, our Program’s namesake and the country’s first African American Secretary of Commerce. It is also a wonderful validation of the Program’s mission to encourage and support our country’s best and brightest future leaders. When Damian was named a Ron Brown Scholar, he was a brilliant young man and the student body president of his high school. Along with six of his RBS classmates, he graduated Harvard in 2002 with a degree in economics.

Celebrating Our 2021 College Graduates

In 2017, American Journey Award recipient Robert F. Smith (Founder, Chairman and CEO of Vista Equity Partners) issued a two-part challenge to the scholarship finalists ahead of their college journeys: “equip your mind” and “form meaningful bonds in your community.” Like our National Selection Committee, he recognized their boundless potential, optimism and talents were matched by their drive to help others. What none of us could have forecasted were the historic hurdles they have had to clear along the way. College should be a period of personal and intellectual growth and such growth can be difficult—even painful—at the best of times. But the challenges they faced and the obstacles they surmounted were truly unlike anything we had ever witnessed.

This summer upon their graduation, Mr. Smith kindly video-taped a message to them as below:

“Congratulations Class of 2021! Just four years ago I saw you become Ron Brown Scholars and that night you enthusiastically accepted the honor of bearing his name and legacy, reflecting his devotion to education and social justice. As you graduate, after a year of unfathomable changes know that so many of us are proud of you, myself included. Always remember, you had a course of cheerleaders, coaches, mentors, and caregivers who know you will repay them by returning the favors. We cannot wait to see you blossom even more especially in the next few years. Life after college is rewarding but arduous in new ways. I will remind you of something I said four years (continued on page 9)

Reimagining a new world takes innovative and courageous leaders. We need them now more than ever. So, it was fitting that the theme of the 2021 Ron Brown Leaders Summit held in June was “Leaders for a New Age.” Over the five-day event, Ron Brown Scholars, Ron Brown Captains and Partners came together to explore and discuss topics ranging from Black Advancement in Corporate America to Women in STEM – Knowing Their Worth. The content, speakers, attendees and conversations were inspiring. Over 200 attendees participated in the 2021 Ron Brown Leaders Summit; 95% undergraduates and 5% Alumni all providing overwhelmingly positive feedback.

The top Career Interest Areas among attendees were:

- Business & Finance
- Computer Science & Engineering
- Entrepreneurship
- Healthcare
- Social Activism
- Law
- Public Service/ Government
- Consulting
- Life Sciences
- International Affairs

Special thanks to our Summit Emcee John Okhiulu (RBS 2017), our keynote speaker, Dorcia Jolliff, Vice President and Chief Information Officer, Lockheed Martin Space IT and to all of our panelists and volunteers who made this event a success.

We couldn’t have done this without the support of our Partners: Apex Clean Energy, Capital One, Deloitte, Dodge & Cox, Evertrue, General Catalyst, Goldman Sachs, Google, Latham & Watkins, Lockheed Martin, Otis Elevator, Plume Design, RTI, Schwarzman Scholars, Wake Forest University School of Business and Weber Shandwick.

The wheels are already in motion for the 2022 Summit. If COVID guidelines allow, we expect the 2022 Summit to take place on June 24-25 in New York City. Contact us for updates and information on special sponsorship packages.
Welcome New Partner Evertrue

We are proud to welcome Evertrue as our newest corporate partner in the Ron Brown – Ruth and Norman Rales Leaders Network. A leader in university relationship management technology, Evertrue’s emphasis on strategy and innovation is a perfect fit for our creative and solutions-focused young leaders. Evertrue hit the ground running engaging with our Network this summer. Students enjoyed hearing from Marquis Davis DEI Chair, Business Development Rep for Evertrue during the Black Advancement panel session at the 2021 Ron Brown Leaders Summit.

Corporate Partners are extremely valuable to the development of our Ron Brown Scholars and Captains. They provide a trusted source of job and internship opportunities facilitated through networking and recruiting activities. We thank all of our Partners for their investment of time and resources and supporting our vision to build a transformational network of diverse leaders who drive change in the workplace and our communities.

LEADERS NETWORK PARTNERS
GPS: Celebrating Five Years

The Guided Pathway Support Program is celebrating 5 years providing college access services to thousands of college-bound African-American high school juniors and seniors. Through our individualized approach, nearly 600 students in the GPS Class of 2021 have matriculated to institutions of higher learning this fall. This year’s class are also winners of a range of prestigious scholarships such as Coca Cola, QuestBridge, KPMG and the inaugural Oprah Winfrey Leaders Scholarship program.

As students return to in-person classes we continue our virtual programming, which includes weekly webinars for the Class of 2022 and Class of 2023, the second cohort of our leadership council and events for professional development. Our Campus Connections initiative, which pairs current high school seniors with current undergraduates in the RBSP family boasts more than 50 mentors and 75 mentees this year.

Our high-tech, high-touch approach means GPS is uniquely positioned to equip students with the know-how to do more than get into college. Last year we partnered with Google’s Applied Digital Skills to help close the digital divide. Our counselors created a series of lessons to teach students to master the tools of the 21st century workplace. This year, GPS continues to expand our educational offerings with a program focusing on financial literacy. With the help of RBSP partners at Dodge & Cox and the ed-tech company EverFi, we’re tackling the wealth gap head-on by ensuring that every GPS student will know how to budget, save, invest and manage their money.

GPS mentors serve as personal advisors who provide students with support and a second set of eyes on application materials, which leads to better outcomes throughout the application process. GPS alum and Brown undergraduate Princess Tsivor says “I hope to encourage my mentee throughout the entire college application process so that they have no regrets.”

GPS senior Anita Dugbarrey joined GPS last year and was one of only two high school juniors selected to participate in this summer’s weeklong General Catalyst Venture Capital Externship Program. She credits the community with preparing her for the pressures of college admissions.

“GPS has been such a big support for me through the application process” Dugbarrey says. “It’s been so great getting to lean on mentors who push me to do my best. It’s helped me secure opportunities I never imagined getting. I’m so grateful to this program.”

This summer the GPS team submitted a proposal that was selected for the 2022 SXSW EDU Conference and Festival. The presentation, “Rethinking College Access Counseling,” is slated as part of the Future 20 programming. SXSW EDU is an international education conference based in Austin, TX that empowers the community to advance teaching and learning. The conference will take place in-person and online March 7-10, 2022.

This fall, GPS partnered with Jack and Jill of America to create a series of presentations for their student population. Already, GPS has shared its mission with over 500 families and regional directors within Jack and Jill, which has created an increase in student enrollment. We look forward to continuing our work together and reaching more students in the coming months.

GPS accepts applications and serves students throughout the calendar year with no income or GPA requirements. Services are offered at no charge to students or their families. College-bound African American rising high school juniors and seniors are encouraged to apply to the Guided Pathway Support Program at www.rbsgps.com. Questions about the program may be directed to gpsprogram@ronbrown.org.
This summer GPS partnered with General Catalyst (GC), a venture capital firm focused on early stage and growth investments, to create the General Catalyst Venture Capital Externship Program. Seven GPS Navigators were chosen for the competitive opportunity and took part in a weeklong series of programming designed to engage students with the world of venture capital.

Over the course of five days, the externs participated in Team Deep Dives, where they engaged in exercises and lectures with five different GC teams. They also attended speaker sessions with executives-in-residence and founders, where they had a chance to personally interact one-on-one with Toyin Ajayi, Chief Health Officer of Cityblock Health; Robin Washington, board member of Alphabet (parent company of Google), Honeywell and Salesforce; Ryan Williams, CEO and Co-Founder of Cadre; and Harvard Business School professor Youngme Moon.

The programming was highlighted by two speakers with close ties to RBSP: a keynote talk by former American Express CEO and 2014 American Journey Awards honoree Ken Chenault, and a presentation by 2008 RBS Scholar Peter Boyce, who previously worked at GC and is now the Founder & Managing Partner of Stellation Capital, an early stage venture capital firm headquartered in Brooklyn.

The week culminated with each extern delivering a firm-wide presentation on their independent research project. Students chose a consumer company of personal interest and applied the skills and knowledge they learned throughout the week, including projections for the company’s growth, analysis of potential challenges and a recommendation for investors.

“General Catalyst was blown away by the experience working not only with the Ron Brown Scholar team in the planning stages, but with the students themselves” says Madison Morales of GC’s talent division. “Our teams were in awe of the students that participated in our summer externship, how they conducted themselves and their deep engagement in the work. We came away energized and inspired for the future!”
Ron Brown Alumni Working at Deloitte

Deloitte. Deloitte has been a premiere sponsor and source of professional opportunities for Ron Brown Scholars and Captains since 2013. Over 50 Scholars and Captains have launched their careers with Deloitte. Now, a group has launched an effort to organize networking and support for the Ron Brown Family working at Deloitte. Organized by Deloitte National Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Recruiter Carmen Mandujano along with Ron Brown alumni Ericardo Edwards and Emmanuel Dawson, both consultants at the firm, the group held their kick-off meeting in July. A virtual Ron Brown Alumni Reunion Meet & Greet Happy Hour featured dinner, introductions and remarks from Deloitte Principal and Ron Brown Board of Trustee member Brian Siegel, who talked with the group and addressed questions about professional progression strategies at the firm.

The Deloitte Ron Brown Alumni hosted an interview workshop in September for current Ron Brown students to help them prepare for case interviewing, the common interview method for consulting firms. This group also hopes to offer mentoring for Ron Brown students and maintain a regular calendar of networking events in the future.

Remembering our Dear Friend

General Colin L. Powell
(April 5, 1937 – October 18, 2021)

During the early years of the Ron Brown Scholar Program, General Colin Powell would be our surprise guest for the Scholar finalists when they arrived in Washington, D.C. for interviews. You should have seen the excitement in their faces when he walked in the room! He was so generous with his time.

For the past 25 years the General Powell has been there for us behind the scenes as a donor, advisor and friend. We thank him for everything he has done to mentor, encourage and challenge generations of young men and women.

“Mr. Mallory surprised us with the wonderful opportunity to meet General Colin Powell during my Ron Brown Selection Weekend in 1999! We visited General Powell at the America Promise Alliance office. He was so down to earth. He took time and sat with us scholars and reminisced about his relationship with Ron Brown and encouraged us as young leaders. I left so inspired! I am so grateful to have met General Powell, to observed his leadership and for his support of the Ron Brown Scholar Program.”

Damian Williams

Damian then earned an MPhil in International Relations from Cambridge, where he was the Lionel de Jersey Harvard scholar at Emmanuel College. Before heading to Yale, where he earned a JD in 2007, he spent time campaigning for John F. Kerry and working directly for the chairman of the Democratic National Committee—a position once held by Ron Brown himself.

Damian brings to his new role as US Attorney a tremendous breadth and depth of experience. He clerked for Attorney General Merrick Garland when the latter was an appellate judge, and later for Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens. As a litigation associate at the New York firm Paul, Weiss, Damian gained valuable experience in white collar criminal defense before crossing the aisle to join the US Attorney’s office as a prosecutor. He joined the US Attorney’s office in 2012, serving most recently as Co-Chief of the Securities and Commodities Fraud Task Force. His experience with securities fraud and public corruption—a highly technical and fairly specialized corner of the law—will serve him well as he directs an office whose remit includes Wall St.—and therefore a sizable fraction of the country’s financial system.

ago, “A fight is not won by how long you stay on your feet. It’s won by how quickly you get up off the ground.” When I saw you walk across the Ron Brown Scholar stage years ago, when you were selected, I knew you were the right choice and you proved us all right. You received that college degree. Now I will watch you even more closely to see how you impact our communities in extraordinary ways. Congratulations and God Bless.”

Additionally, we are immensely grateful to RBSP Board of Trustees member, Meredith Eggers and her husband Barry, for their kindness and incredible hospitality as they generously hosted this year’s Stanford graduates and their families at their home.

We are proud of each and every one of the Class of 2017, for all they have accomplished, for all they have overcome and for all the good they have done and will continue to do.

Scholar Spotlight: Adinawa Adjagbodjou

Adinawa Adjagbodjou (RBS 2016) was born in Cotonou, Benin and immigrated to the United States with her family, and grew up in Dallas, Texas. She attended Harvard College and graduated with a Bachelors in Economics and Computer Science, and enjoyed taking courses in the African and African American Studies department. During college, she had the opportunity to experience a transformative semester abroad in Paris, France.

Throughout her academic journey at Harvard, Adinawa took opportunities to think critically about the development of nations such as her own, through the lens of technology, economics and the rippling effects of colonial political power and oppression. This work and her engagement with the youth in the African community during her time in Paris helped shape her desire for community-focused and designed solutions. She merged this new direction with her love for Human Centered Computing and Design and its potential for innovative and sustainably impactful change.

This passion led her to further entangle herself in the world of interactive and user centered design and because of it, she has had the opportunity to research and develop tools that make technology more interactive and equitable. This past year, she had the opportunity to develop QuVis, a novel visualization platform for quantum circuit composition, exploration, and analysis for those being introduced to the world of quantum computing. Furthermore, she had the opportunity to work with peers at the Harvard School of Engineering and Applied Sciences and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to develop a set of guidelines which can be followed or implemented in industry and academia that places Critical Race Theory at the forefront of AI technology development and deployment.

Adinawa is now continuing her graduate studies in Human-Computer Interaction at Carnegie Mellon University, where she is pursuing a PhD in Computer Science. Her current project focuses on how innovative futures that center the needs of Black people can be created with their involvement and combines community design with local partners and activists. She believes that teaching is one of the best ways to share your passion with any community that you care about; she volunteers in the Digital Literacy Program teaching students Roxbury middle schools’ computer and coding skills on a weekly basis. This program is a continuation of her commitment to empowering black youth and black women in their pursuit of STEM. In her future work, she hopes to continue her work on understanding how public artificial intelligence algorithms affect the daily lives of marginalized individuals, ranging from health outcomes, to education, and safety and well-being.

GREATEST IMPACT: Working to build spaces that uplifted the voices and supported the needs of students of color on campus, even when that meant demanding and protesting for change. I had the honor and privilege of serving two terms as the Chair of the Harvard Foundation for Intercultural and Race Relations, the Vice President of the Association of Black Harvard Women (ABHW), and the Co-Chair of the Black Community Leaders (BCL). Additionally, I was involved in the Planning and Programming committee that organized and executed Harvard’s inaugural First Year Residential Experience (FYRE), an orientation program serving first generation and low-income freshmen in 2018, leading to FYRE successfully moving from a pilot program to an institutionalized full-length orientation program.

WAYS TO SUPPORT THE RON BROWN SCHOLAR PROGRAM

We are truly appreciative to have the opportunity to explore new partnerships or donations to help make an extraordinary impact on the lives of these talented young people and our next generation of leaders. If you would like to support the Program, below is a list of options for your consideration—we appreciate every gift, no matter the size. Thank you.

Share Information with Friends
We encourage you to share information about the Ron Brown Scholar Program and the Scholars with friends/family/colleagues who may be interested in learning more or making a donation. Or let us know if you would like us to reach out to anyone directly.

Host a virtual Fundraiser
Please consider hosting a virtual fundraiser, or you may set up a fundraiser on social media to support the Ron Brown Scholar Program.

Emergency Funds/Donations & Monthly Gifts
Visit www.ronbrown.org or send a check made payable to Ron Brown Scholar Fund and mail to:
485 Hillsdale Drive, Suite 206, Charlottesville, VA, 22901

AmazonSmile
We are an official organization recognized to participate in the Amazon Smile Charity Giving Program. Please designate the Ron Brown Scholar Fund as your favorite charity so that a portion of the purchases you make through Amazon (.05%) will be donated to the Program. There is no additional cost to you to do this.

Matching Gifts
Matching gifts are offered by many companies to encourage philanthropy giving amongst their employees. Please check with your company to learn if they participate in a matching gift program.

Scholarship Agreements
Fully fund a $40,000 scholarship to support a Ron Brown Scholar. Option to pay $10,000 per year for 4 years. Please contact Michael Mallory mmallory@ronbrown.org or Anita Karadia akaustria@ronbrown.org.

Partnership Agreements

Leaders Network Partnership
Consider joining the Ron Brown – Ruth and Norman Rales Leaders Network partners to help achieve your company’s diversity and inclusion goals. Please contact Holly Duke hduke@ronbrown.org.

GPS Educational Partnerships
By partnering with GPS, you would enjoy access to the entire GPS community, comprised of 1,000+ high school juniors, seniors, and their parents, and advance your recruitment efforts. For more information contact Kiya Jones kjones@ronbrown.org or Randy Tripp, Jr. rtripp@ronbrown.org.
